About ABVS

The Automated Best Value System (ABVS), formerly called the Automated Best Value Model, is a computerized system that collects a vendor's existing past performance data and translates it into a numeric score. The contracting officer then uses the score as an additional evaluation factor when making best value award decisions.

DLA assigns an ABVS score to each vendor based on the vendor's past performance. Vendors receive scores for performance in each federal supply class (FSC scores). The FSC scores are based on DLA consolidated performance history. A vendor may have multiple FSC scores but will have only one DLA score, which is a compilation of the vendor's FSC scores for all business conducted with DLA.

Calculated monthly, ABVS scores are in effect for a month

The DLA system uses 24 months of past performance history as the standard rating period. Each monthly update includes
